DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:

- I. Claims 1-11, drawn to a method for producing cardiomyocytes and for improving ventricular wall motion in a heart of an individual, comprising administration of cardiomyocyte producing mesenchymal stem cells, classifiable in class 424, subclass 93.1.
- II. Claims 12-21, drawn to a method of repairing blood vessels or promoting angiogenesis in the heart of an individual, comprising administration of mesenchymal stem cells to heart tissue, classifiable in class 424, subclass 93.1.

The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of the following reasons:

Although there are no provisions under the section for "Relationship of Inventions" in MPEP 806.05 for inventive groups that are directed to different methods, restriction is deemed to be proper because these methods appear to constitute patentably distinct inventions. The method of Group I pertains to a method for producing cardiomyocytes and for improving ventricular wall motion in a heart of an individual, comprising administration of mesenchymal stem cells. The method of Group III involves the repair of blood vessels or promotion of angiogenesis in the heart of an individual, comprising administration of mesenchymal stem cells to heart tissue. By contrast, the method of Group I is not directed to the promotion of angiogenesis, but rather, the production of cardiomyocytes. The promotion of angiogenesis or the repair of blood vessels of the heart requires cellular components, such as endothelial cells, that are distinct from cardiomyocytes. Hence, the cardiomyocyte producing mesenchymal stem cells of Groups I and II are not required for the angiogenesis promoting method of Group III and vice versa. Since the methods of Groups I and II are directed to different goals and there exists a number of different mesenchymal stem cells, and because said stem cells are known to be multipotent, the state of physiological environment into which mesenchymal stem cells are introduced impacts the differentiation of said stem cells, likely resulting in distinct outcomes.

In the instant case, the search of the different treatment conditions required for mesenchymal stem cells and subsequent differentiation of said stem cells are not coextensive. The search of inventions of Groups I-II together would therefore impose a serious search burden.

Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art because of their recognized divergent subject matter, and are separately searched, and/or because of the patentably distinct species are listed above, it would be unduly burdensome for the examiner to search and examine all of the subject matter being sought in the presently pending claims, and thus, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

Applicant is advised that the response for this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement may be traversed.

Applicant is reminded that upon the cancellation of claims to a non-elected invention, the inventorship must be amended in compliance with 37 CFR 1.48(b) if one or more of the currently named inventors is no longer an inventor of at least one claim remaining in the application. Any amendment of inventorship must be accompanied by a request under 37 CFR 1.48(b) and by the fee required under 37 CFR 1.17(i).
